

Palliative Care in Poetry

Andrea Frossard*

Brazilian National Cancer Institute, Brazil

Submission: February 08, 2020; Published: February 13, 2020

*Corresponding author: Andrea Frossard, Brazilian National Cancer Institute, Brazil

Opinion

In the empty corridor, silence prevails. A few days have passed and that patient in a new hospital stay. She wanted all the time in the world and as it was not possible, she reinvented herself in poetry, transforming her pain into art, eternalizing herself.

The Arche

The beginning

The essence

The life cycle: from birth to death

The right to life, to existence.

Welcoming and caring arm in arm

Ardently wishing for more than just surviving

No matter if it is for a few months or days

Life

Indelicacy

An indelicacy is like a petal that comes off a rose in a natural state of beauty.

Time

In the afternoon, weeping quietly

Awakens with an open dry mouth

Naked body

Light-colored clothes on the floor

At night, in a dream full of complicit glances

Half-open windows waiting

Let me live without haste

At Night

That night different from the others

Dreams and sweets

Inspiration

Searching

The old as the valuable wine at hand

Free in nature

Moves ahead without a curve

The Trip

The woman felt such an intense pain that the gray color prevailed and the courage said farewell, but it was necessary to find the way out. In calmness in proximity to peace the creation in exact tone. From strangeness came power and she followed the stars instinctively.

This work is licensed under Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 License
DOI: 10.19080/PMCIJ.2020.03.555609

Your next submission with Juniper Publishers will reach you the below assets

- Quality Editorial service
- Swift Peer Review
- Reprints availability
- E-prints Service
- Manuscript Podcast for convenient understanding
- Global attainment for your research
- Manuscript accessibility in different formats

( Pdf, E-pub, Full Text, Audio)

- Unceasing customer service

Track the below URL for one-step submission
<https://juniperpublishers.com/online-submission.php>